

How vaccines strengthen your baby's immune system¹

Your child is exposed to thousands of germs every day in his or her environment.

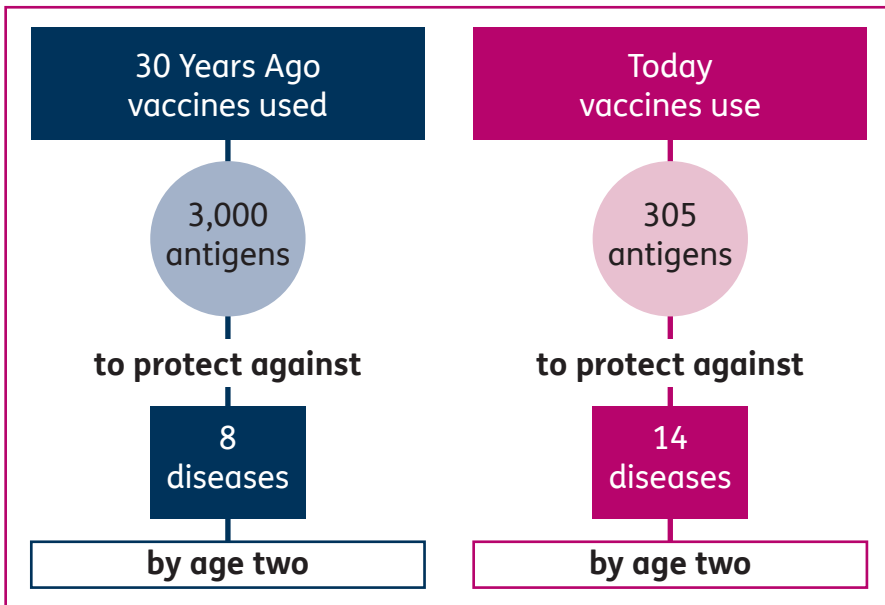

This happens through the food a child eats, the air a child breathes, and things a child puts in his or her mouth.

Babies are born with immune systems that can fight most germs, but children can't handle some deadly diseases.

That's why they need vaccines to strengthen their immune system.

Vaccine use very small amounts of antigens to help your child's immune system recognize and learn to fight serious diseases.

Antigens are parts of germs that cause the body's immune system to go to work.

Thanks to scientific advances, today's vaccines can protect children from more diseases using fewer antigens.

Vaccines contain only a tiny fraction of the antigens that babies encounter in their environment every day.

Vaccines help strengthen your baby's immune system and keep him or her safe from vaccine-preventable diseases.

Immunization. Power to Protect.
